Historical Background of the Ethiopian Bible

The Origins of the Ethiopian Canon

The Ethiopian Orthodox Tewahedo Church possesses one of the oldest Christian traditions in the world, tracing its origins back to the 4th century AD. According to tradition, Christianity was introduced to Ethiopia during the reign of King Ezana of Axum, making Ethiopia one of the earliest nations to adopt Christianity as the state religion. The Ethiopian biblical canon is distinctive because it includes several books that are not found in the Western Christian canon, such as the Ethiopian Enuma (Book of Enoch), Jubilees, and other texts considered apocryphal elsewhere. The canon comprises:

- 81 books in total
- The Old Testament (including the Deuterocanonical books)
- The New Testament
- Additional texts unique to the Ethiopian tradition

The Role of Ge'ez and Translation Efforts

Originally, the scriptures were written in Ge'ez, a liturgical language that remains significant in religious ceremonies. For centuries, the Ge'ez Bible served as the primary sacred text for Ethiopian Christians. However, with increasing interaction with the Western world and the need to make these texts accessible to non-Ge'ez speakers, translation efforts began in earnest. The first translations into other languages, including Amharic and English, emerged in the 19th and 20th centuries. These translations aimed to preserve the theological nuances of the original texts while making them accessible to a broader audience. ---
